

Call for Entries : Sehsüchte 2015

From April 22 to April 26, 2015, the 44th Sehsüchte International Student Film Festival in Potsdam-Babelsberg (next to Berlin) will be proud to present films from students and amateur filmmakers from all over the world. The high-profile members of the jury will award the best works with prizes totalling up to 50,000 Euros. For the first time, the festival will award the prize for Best Sound.

Sehsüchte will go back to the roots in 2015, putting more focus on its initial raison d'être as a festival for an audience of film fans. The theme of 2015 is "Echo", focusing on response and feedback, aftermath and resonance, action and reaction. The interplay and relationships of filmmakers with their audiences will hence be the primary focus of Sehsüchte 2015, and this common thread will further shape the events as well as our supporting programme.

Submissions are now being accepted for both short films and full-length films in the following categories: feature films, documentaries, animated films, music videos, as well as films for children and teenagers.

All students and amateur filmmakers are eligible to participate! We also accept film debuts.

The Producer's Award honours the best production value in the making of a feature film. Students at any film academy in Germany who have acted in the capacity of producer of a feature film are eligible to win the award.

Please pay attention to the festival regulations and technical requirements for playback formats and digital storage devices. You can find both on our website.

Registration: The online application form as well as further information can be found at www.sehsuechte.de.

Application Deadline: January 23, 2015

We are looking forward to your submission!
